5. Guiding principles and statute of the Jugendwerk

1. Guiding principles

- 1.1 The Jugendwerk der Arbeiterwohlfahrt is a children's and youth association working democratically, independently and on its own responsibility within the framework of its statutes. The structural setup is determined by the statute.
- 1.2 The Jugendwerk is committed to its tradition as part of the workers' movement and its achievements.
- 1.3 The Jugendwerk understands itself as a political children's and youth association with demands to political decision-makers based on its positions. The Jugendwerk is independent of party politics and denominations.
- 1.4 The Jugendwerk is organised and determined by voluntary, young people.
- 1.5 As an active member association, the Jugendwerk continues to develop through the participation of all members within a democratic and dialogical process.
- 1.6 The Jugendwerk is involved in social and political fields of action together with the Arbeiterwohlfahrt (AWO). The traditional target group of the Jugendwerk are children, adolescents and young adults, especially those who are socially disadvantaged.
- 1.7 The Jugendwerk cooperates with other democratic youth organisations and participates in the work of youth rings or comparable associations at all levels.
- 1.8 The Jugendwerk is open to ALL young people who recognise these guiding principles.

2. Values

In all its activities, the Jugendwerk is committed to the values of democratic socialism: freedom, justice, emancipation, solidarity, equality and tolerance. The Jugendwerk sees these values as the basic prerequisite for a dignified life. Freedom, emancipation, justice, solidarity, equality and tolerance are mutually dependent and cannot be seen independently of each other. Every human being is unique, mature and unmistakable. Every human being is equal in dignity to other human beings. Every human being is therefore fundamentally able to develop his or her personality in a self-determined way according to his or her own needs and wishes. In a just society, this freedom is recognised insofar as it does not restrict the freedom of another person. Solidarity means going beyond tolerance and mere legal obligations to stand up for each other through practical action and to stand up for enabling participation in all areas of social and societal life.

These values must be considered against the background of the concept of humanity by the Jugendwerk der AWO. We set our goals of emancipation and solidarity against economisation and isolation.

3. Image of humanity

As a social and societal being, human beings develop their personality in dialogue with others. All values and views of a human being are not naturally given, but are developed in the community with others. In order to live self-determined lives in a society, people need a discourse with equal rights. In this discourse, the Jugendwerk advocates the ability for maturity, emancipation and solidarity in children, young people and adults.

4. Goals & demands

In its image of humanity and in the realisation of the values of democratic socialism, the Jugendwerk sees the overcoming of externally determined living conditions as well as the enabling of emancipatory, responsible and solidary action within.

The Jugendwerk concretises its goals in positioning and concepts, which guide its work. Accordingly, the Jugendwerk demands:

- Needs-based justice instead of performance-based justice for the distribution of all social wealth.
- Gender mainstreaming, a critical examination of and dissolution of gender and role constructions and the overcoming of gender injustice.
- Self-determined and dialogical learning as a principle of all forms of education.
- The right of each individual to participate in the areas of life that are important to him or her.
- Young people should be encouraged and supported to think and act in solidarity and socially, as well as to get involved in solving social and political tasks.
- To empower young people to counteract undemocratic tendencies within society.
- The Jugendwerk strives to reduce all forms of discrimination within the association and in society.

5. Responsibilities

The main focus of the Jugendwerk's responsibilities is group work with children, adolescents and young adults. As a representation of the interests of children and young people, the Jugendwerk makes it its task to enable all young people to participate within society. The Jugendwerk fulfils this task by creating spaces for extracurricular youth education and youth promotion in which young people can actively develop. Within this framework, the Jugendwerk facilitates democratic, dialogical, reciprocal educational and decision-making processes. From its value-based group work with children, adolescents and young adults, the Jugendwerk develops its positions, which it represents through internal and external action, as well as through demands on political decision-makers.
